REPORTED DEMPSEY WILL MEET TUNNEY DURING SEPTEMBER

Fighters Say They Are Willing To Sign
For Bout

LOS ANGELES, Cal., June 23.—Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight champion and Gene Tunney, foremost challenger, probably will meet in a title bout next September despite refusal of the New York boxing commission to approve the match.

Both fighters, in interviews today with the United Press declared they were willing and would be ready to meet at the proper time, and in any one of the forty-seven other states in the nation.

"It doesn't matter to me where the match is staged," said Dempsey. "I will fight Tunney in Jersey City or in any other place that Tex Rickard picks."

The challenger appeared similarly unconcerned.

"Of course, I am disappointed," he said, "but if Tex Rickard takes the fight across the river its O. K. with me. I have waited a long time for a chance at Dempsey and whether we fight in New York or in some other state is not going to make any difference."

Neither Tunney nor Dempsey appeared worried over the boxing board's threat to bar them from fighting in New York if they take part in a title match in another state. Both felt, they declared that the next championship battle would be a bigger event than anything that has yet taken place.

"I was never in better condition in my life," Dempsey declared today. "Of course I only weigh 183 pounds. I haven't changed five pounds in my weight in the last ten years."

The champion will be thirty years old tomorrow. He trains daily in his downtown gymnasium and next week he leaves for his mountain camp at Colorado Springs. On August 1, he goes into training at his quarters in Saratoga Springs, N. Y., where he plans to pull off for his September battle.

Dempsey, at this time probably is in better physical shape than Tunney, whose mimic love making in the glare of the movie lights and calcium is admittedly poor training for a world's champion prize fight.

The champion retired from the "movie racket" nearly a year ago, and press reports to the contrary, has adhered since to a rigid course of training in anticipation of a clash with either Tunney or Harry Wills, negro challenger, in September.

INVENTORS TRYING TO INVENT DEVICES FOR FLYING SAFETY

WASHINGTON, June 23.—All parts of the country are attempting to perfect devices to make flying safe as walking. It is learned at the U. S. Patent Office.

Inventions of every description, to prevent airplanes from crashing to the earth, have been sent in to Commissioner T. E. Robertson. Patents have been granted on about 300 types and an equally large number have been rejected or are pending.

Parachutes, balloons, extra wings gas bags, and all sorts of trick devices to keep planes in the air in case of engine trouble or other accident have been patented recently.

Two Philadelphians have patented a balloon parachute safety device which they believe will prevent aviation disasters. Under their plan there is a large parachute and a balloon on the top wings of a plane. Automatically when a plane begins to fall at the release of a catch by the pilot the parachute opens and the gas bag begins to fill with noninflammable gas. The balloon part is to right the ship while the parachute is to bring it slowly and safely to the earth. This safety apparatus is supposed to prevent an airplane from crashing and is supposed to bring it right side up whether it is doing a tail spin, nose dive or side swerve.

A North Carolina inventor patented a contrivance that fits snugly on the upper wings of a plane and opens into a parachute when the tail end of a plane is pitched.

Still another has a parachute on the tail end of a plane, his theory is that the heavy engine will force a ship to tail nose-down and the chute on the rudder end will bring the craft slowly to the earth in case of an emergency.

Officials of the Patent Office said however that the parachute devices for airplanes was not very successful as it requires such large chutes. They pointed out that if it takes fifty square feet to hold a man up in the air it would take a parachute many times larger to save a plane.

Balloon and gas bag safety apparatus, they said, were well enough if the pilot has time enough to fill his bags with lifting gas in the face of an emergency.

WILL KEEP NAMES OF WITNESSES BEFORE COMMITTEE SECRET

Publicity Hurts Inquiry Senate Probers Learn—
—Process Servers Unable To Find
Certain Witnesses

WASHINGTON, June 23.—The future course of the senate committee's investigation into the $3,000,000 Pennsylvania primary will be carefully guarded because of recently discouraging reports of too much publicity.

Chairman Reed announced today that names of witnesses to be summoned hereafter will not be divulged until the process servers have found them and served papers for their appearance.

His action was taken after the committee had been advised that the servers were unable to locate Thomas W. Cunningham, treasurer of the Pennsylvania Republican state committee and Francis X. O'Connor, magistrate in Philadelphia, who are wanted for vital testimony.

Reed said three or four additional subpoenas were issued for new witnesses but declined to make public their names.

The witnesses were understood to have been called on the basis of letters and telegrams from private citizens, purporting to tell what evidence the witnesses could give.

So reticent has the committee become after encountering disap-

KANSAS RANCHERS REVIVE OLDEN DAYS

MATFIELD, GREEN, Kans., June 23.—Harking back to former days when fences were unknown in these parts and when cowboys abounded the large ranches, cattlemen of the Flint Hills section of Kansas have found trailing cattle a more economical method of moving them than shipping by rail.

Long trails of dust laden clouds were seen near here this spring when Crocker Brothers, extensive cattle raisers of this country, moved a herd of more than 2,500 head by trailing from the Osage country in Oklahoma to Chase and Butler Counties of Kansas. The cattle had been wintered on pastures in the Osage country.

The greater part of the herd was rounded up in the vicinity of Foreaker, Okla., and driven to the south part of Chase County, Kans. According to the owners, the drive required ten days.

The Crocker Brothers found that the expense of bringing the herd into Kansas for the summer to be between thirty and forty per cent less than the cost of transportation by rail would have totaled.

PLAN OHIO SCHOOL REFORM

TEACHERS PROPOSE LEGISLATION THAT MAY CHANGE SYSTEM

Favor Abolishment Of
Levy and Adoption of
County Unit

CEDAR POINT, O., June 23.—The state school system will undergo an almost complete reformation if legislation proposed to the Ohio State Teachers Association convention here today is enacted.

After a stormy session interposed by bitter wrangling, the association education council recommended to the joint legislative committee on taxation the following:

1.—That the state be redistricted, eliminating the "little red school house" and establishing the county as the potential unit.

2.—That educational standards designed to eliminate incompetent teachers, be set up, establishing nine months of first class education throughout the state.

3.—That the existing 2.65 mill levy be abolished and the county unit taxation plan be adopted.

The recommendations were formulated by the council last year and were adopted only after strenuous opposition.

Each recommendation will be injected into a legislative bill which is to be offered the next general assembly.

Jerome Hull, superintendent of Mahoning county schools, led the remonstrators, declaring the recommendations failed to provide financial equality in some districts and left the schools at the mercy of politicians in others.

The education council cited these facts in support of its attitude:

"There are 114,000 Ohio children in one room schools, twenty-two counties have no high schools, five-sixths of the school population of the state is housed in one-third of the schools, many rural districts are handled for the profit of the school board and many county auditors are unable to properly distribute funds."

The new law, the council asserted, not only would assure competent teachers but also sufficient buildings and equipment.

DREAMS COME TRUE SOMETIMES MISS PAGE FINDS

Dreams sometimes come true, as Rosilyn Page, heroine of May Christie's new serial story which started in this paper yesterday, is finding out in the second chapter of the tale, "The Gilded Rose," which is published today.

She dreamed of attention and kind words from Landis Ridgeway, handsome, debonaire and wealthy guest at her father's inn, and that young hero responded by speaking to her endeavoring to understand the longing in her heart for a taste of real living.

Thus two chapters of Miss Christie's promising story indicate a plot development that is bound to entrance the casual reader and captivate his attention until the complete unfolding of the yarn brings to its intriguing conclusion.

Management of The Evening Gazette and The Morning Republican believes that in signing Miss Christie to write serials for these papers a particularly praiseworthy thing has been accomplished.

Readers of serial stories are favored with one of the best from the pen of the best and an association has been started that is expected to bring to readers fiction of a quality that will prove entertaining during the summer months.

DEMOCRATS TRY TO FORCE CUT IN TAXES

WASHINGTON, June 23.—A move to force an immediate tax reduction, including a rebate on this year's payment and abolition of automobile, amusement and all other nuisance taxes, was made today by Democrats in congress.

Cordell Hull, former Democratic national chairman, will introduce late today a resolution directing the Ways and Means Committee to meet a month or two before congress reconvenes next December to draft a bill to "absorb the present $390,000,000 treasury surplus and other revenues."

WEALTHY YOUNG HUSBAND ENDS LIFE AFTER SLAYING HIS WIFE

By United Press
GLEN HEAD, Long Island, June 23.—Servants startled by revolver shots in a country home here went to the room of their 26-year-old mistress to find her dead, a bullet wound above her head, a bullet wound above her heart. In a chair, a few feet away was the body of her 29-year-old husband, a bullet wound in his breast. On the floor between them lay an automatic.

The dead couple were Mr. and Mrs. Sidney E. Brewster, both socially prominent in New York and Long Island.

Brewster, Mayflower descendant, Princeton graduate, world war aviator and recently a real estate man had married less than three years ago. His bride, the former Frances

Tracy Lyon, was a granddaughter of James Lyon of Oswego and Charles Thorpe Gilbert.

Police believe young Brewster last night killed his wife and committed suicide. Only a few seconds came between the two shots. Servants a "Little Scooby" the secluded home which Brewster's mother had given him, said months of quarreling preceded the shootings.

Caillaux accepted appointment as minister of finance in Aristide Briand's ministry, after first having declined.

BELIEVE 750,000 TO ATTEND FINISH OF HUGE CONGRESS

Effect Of Eucharist On
Education Is Chief
Topic

CHICAGO, June 23.—The pilgrimage of 750,000 people to Mundelein, America's Holy City, for Thursday's crowning and concluding ceremony of the Eucharistic Congress, began today.

Although services were held at Soldiers' Field in Chicago, during the morning, many of the faithful in Chicago, started the forty mile trip early to avoid the traffic jams on the road.

A line of automobiles was moving steadily along the various routes. Some had arranged for camping on the scene of Thursday's demonstration, and were equipped with tents and cooking utensils. Others were to stay with friends.

Eucharistic Congress officials estimated 250,000 pilgrims would be on the grounds by midnight.

When services begin Thursday, traffic experts expect 280,000 will have arrived by automobile and 470,000 by train and interurban.

CHICAGO, June 23.—The effect of the Holy Eucharist on education—mainly higher education—was the chief topic of discussion before the twenty-eighth International Eucharistic Congress today.

Leaders in the Catholic educational world were among the 100,000 persons who gathered within the Soldiers Field and heard three speakers discuss education and its relation with the Holy Eucharist. The crowd today had not diminished any from the original throng which gathered for the opening of the sessions Sunday.

His Eminence Dennis Cardinal Dougherty, of Philadelphia presided at the Higher Education Day of the congress. Among the were:

The Most Rev. George Gauthier, Archbishop of Taronia, Montreal; Joseph Scott, a member of the order of Knights of St. Gregory, Los Angeles; His Eminence John Cardinal Cernock, primate of Hungary.

Following the speakers, solemn pontifical high mass was spoken with the Rt. Rev. Edward F. Hoban, bishop auxiliary of Chicago, as celebrant. The sermon was by the most Rev. Austin Dowling, archbishop of St. Paul, Minn.

Today's program was the most representative North American program of the congress, only one speaker coming from other parts of the world.

Sectional meetings for all of the 23 groups were held at the various meeting places over the city this afternoon. Among the speakers for the English group were the St. Rev. Maurice Landrieux, bishop of Dijon, France; the Hon G. Ellis-worth Anstruthers, editor of "The Tablet," London and the Rev. Vincent of Lorenzo, Rome.

WALES REACHES 32 BUT STILL BACHELOR

LONDON, June 23.—The Prince of Wales reached the age of 32 today but paid scant attention to the event, being wholly absorbed in a round of official entertainments.

In the morning he received the customary bouquet of flowers from his staff at St. James' Palace and at noon he lunched with the King and Queen at Buckingham Palace, a custom scrupulously observed by the children of the Royal Family; tonight, accompanied by Prince Henry and the Princess Ingrid of Sweden, he is expected to "look in" at a big dinner dance in Belgravia where he will probably get a big shower of confetti. In all other respects his birthday will pass like other days.

However, the Empire will celebrate with gusto. Flags were flown on all government buildings throughout the United Kingdom, the Dominions and the Colonies, and at noon sharp the royal salute of twenty-one guns boomed out at naval and military stations.

WILL BUILD BOARD SPEED AT AKRON

AKRON, O., June 23.—Plans for the construction of a $750,000 board speedway, a mile and a half in length, were revealed here by Frank Nied, local sports promoter. Representing Akron and Cleveland promoters, Nied told of the need of a speedway near Akron, which has been for many years, a fertile field for dirt track automobile racing.

Property worth $80,000 has already been purchased for the track.

COMMANDER BYRD AT CAPITAL FOR AWARD FROM EXECUTIVES

Hubbard Gold Medal
Will Be Given
Polar Flyer

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Lieut. Commander Richard E. Byrd today reported to his superiors and prepared to receive at their hands an award for his achievement as the first aviator to fly over the North Pole.

President Coolidge and Secretary of the Navy Wilbur were to present Byrd with the Hubbard Gold Medal. Floyd Bennett who accompanied Byrd on his flight, will receive a gold medal. The presentations were arranged by the National Geographic Society.

It was the improved type of sun compass presented to Byrd by Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, President of the National Geographic Society, which guided the daring pilot on his successful flight to the Pole and back from Spitzbergen. It likewise enabled him to determine his exact location at the pole.

The Hubbard Gold Medal has been awarded to four other men, and only two other Americans. Commander Robert E. Peary received it in 1906 following his discovery of the Pole and General Goethals was given the award in 1914 by President Wilson. The last medal was awarded in 1919 to Wilhelmsen, while Sir Ernest Shackleton was honored by its presentation in 1910.

Commander Byrd will tell of his exploit at a gathering tonight which will include the President and members of his cabinet, members of the diplomatic corps, prominent scientists, government officials and fellow officers.

FARM BLOC SOLONS PUSH HAUGEN BILL

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Senators of the agricultural west today made final efforts to obtain passage of the Dawes-McNary-Haugen farm relief bill, which under a unanimous consent agreement is expected to be brought to a vote tomorrow.

Hoping to gather additional votes, the farm bloc has amended the bill, reducing the equalization fund from $250,000,000 to $150,000,000.

Under another amendment to be proposed today, cotton producers will be assured $75,000,000 if necessary to carry out the system provided for the marketing of surplus crops.

Still another amendment already adopted, eliminates cattle from the bill leaving cotton, corn, wheat and hogs as the agricultural commodities affected by the measure.

HUNGARY LEADS IN SUICIDE NUMBER

BUDAPEST, June 23.—Hungary leads the world in suicides. Although the total population of the country is less than eight million, 2,313 persons killed themselves during the past year.

The figure for the next twelve months promises to be even greater. Despite every effort on the part of "anti-self-murder" societies and even greater preventative work on the part of the police to drag suicide candidates from the Danube the number of self-inflicted deaths is increasing each week.

Among the latest suicides was Eugene Balla, Chief of the Police Statistical Bureau, which keeps the record of suicide cases. He used the method most popular with his fellow-suicides. Avoiding the watchful eye of the bridge policeman, whose job it is to hinder such acts, Balla jumped into the Danube from the Margaret Bridge, one of the principal connecting links between the twin cities of Buda and Pest.

CENTRAL ALUMNI PARTY TUESDAY ATTRACTS CROWD

Largest and most successful assembly of alumni of Central High School, a crowd that was far beyond expectations of the officers, was held at new Central High School, Tuesday evening. With reservations for slightly more than 100 people in the hands of the committee Tuesday, the company swelled to 225 for the banquet and program to follow.

The welcome, but unexpected large attendance, was due to the unusually interesting program attracted many who had not attended previous reunions. The increased number as accommodated with effort on the part of those in charge but was successfully managed in every detail.

Alumni began to assemble at 6 o'clock. Halls on the first and second floors of the school were filled with animated groups, renewing old acquaintances and reliving high school memories. Guests were present from over the entire vicinity and from several states. Each guest registered on entering the building, the record being the basis of interesting announcements concerning the classes represented, later.

Thirty-two classes were registered. The oldest class represented was that of 1877. Next in order were 1880, 1887, 1892, 1899 and from that year through 1926. Members of the class of 1926 were honor-guests of the evening and attended the affair in almost a complete group.

One hundred and sixty-three graduates of Central High School were present, the rest being friends, relatives, ex-students and others.

A sumptuous three-course dinner was served in the school cafeteria by Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Kany and staff. Tables were centered with roses and other summer bloom. The bouquets alternating with red, white and blue candles. Invocation was pronounced by the Rev. C. G. Lunan, Piqua.

Mr. W. W. Galloway, president of the Alumni Association, presided. After announcing the various classes represented and other interesting data in connection with the evening, he announced Mr. Karl B. Bloom, who introduced Dr. Arthur M. Schlesinger, professor of American History, Harvard University, main speaker of the evening.

Professor Schlesinger expressed his pleasure in being able to attend the reunion, since it marked the twentieth anniversary of his graduation from "old Central." He said the banquet and reception of guests bore out the Biblical story of "the loaves and fishes."

His "address" was more in the nature of an informal talk, and was opened with many clever, droll statements which delighted his hearers. He spoke of his residence in the East, where ancestors mean much to everyone, but in a subtle manner, joked about this condition, "since every family tree is a bit shady." He said the reason, in his opinion, for the recent evolution quarrel in the South was because one faction attempted to picture the wrong kind of ancestors.

After reminiscences of his class of 1906, Mr. Schlesinger said: "I have been impressed with the fact, that while we owe a great debt to the Xenia school system, there is another educational institution which reaches farther than life and remains which effects children before they reach the school life and stays with them through life. It is made up of the mightiest minds and all countries and is free to every one. I refer to the Public Library."

He proceeded to pay a tribute to the long service of Miss Etta G. McElwain, librarian, Greene County Library. He urged the Alumni Association members to patronize the local library and appreciate the services of Miss McElwain.

Minutes of the 1925 Alumni Association meeting were read by Miss May Orr, secretary. Treasurer's report for last year was read by Mr. Frederick Anderson. Selections of the nominating committee, were then announced by Miss Helen Jones, chairman. Officers chosen by the committee were unanimously accepted by the association, as follows:

President, Mr. Charles O'Brien; vice-president, Miss Marjorie Flynn; secretary, Miss Fay Ledbetter; treasurer, Mr. Norbert McCallister. The executive committee is composed of Mr. Philip Frame, chairman; Mrs. Oren Ledbetter, Mrs. Carl Nybladh, Mr. Lawrence Whittington, Mr. William Horner and Miss Louise B. Shaffer.

Presentation of "Betty Attitudes by eight members of the dramatic class, Xenia Business and Professional Women's Club, followed the banquet, in Jean B. Elwell Auditorium.

The play, in four scenes, was particularly appropriate for an alumni program, since it carried back to the early part of the nineteenth century to the present day. The eternal conflict between mother and daughter and the "shocking" new customs as introduced by each younger generation was the theme of the piece.

Dressed in hoop skirts and all accessories of the quaint period costume of the early "eighties," Miss Elsie Canby and Mrs. Clara Reutlinger, were characters in the first scene. Mother and daughter of the later period of that century were taken by Miss Virginia Fletcher and Miss Robert Shaw. The "Twentieth Century Girl" reminiscent of the "Gibson Girl days" was depicted by Miss Clara Marshall as the "daughter" with Miss Nelle McKay, as the "mother."

The modern mother and daughter were portrayed by Miss Lorena Paulin and Miss Alice Foley, respectively. The latter scene brought out the introduction of the "Charleston," bridge, golf

JURY PROBES DEATH IN PITCHED BATTLE

BATAVIA, O., June 23.—A coroner's jury was convened here today to investigate a pitched battle that resulted in the death of Edward Wood, Concord farmer, the arrest of Robert Gregor, another farmer and the injury of Fred Wood, son of the dead man, and Henry Gregor, father of the prisoner.

Wood was shot to death after he and his son drove onto the Gregor farm to cut bean poles and remove a load of stone, according to police. Gregor was said to have opened fire, killing Wood. Stones then were hurled with young Wood and the elder Gregor being wounded.

The Woods and the Gregors had been at outs for some time. A charge of first degree murder may be made against young Gregor in the inquest, it was said.

RECLUSE BURNED TO DEATH IN HUT

MARTIN'S FERRY, O., June 23.—The charred body of J. F. Glover, 80, former recluse and self-styled "medicine man," was found today in the ruins of what had been his sheet-iron hut near here.

The discovery was made by passing motorists, who were drawn to the scene by wisps of smoke rising above the trees.

The death of the aged man was shrouded in as much mystery as was his life.

Mr. and Mrs. Merlin F. Crutcher, Wilbur Wright Field, are receiving congratulations on the birth of a daughter, Marjorie Jean, at St. Ann's, Dayton, Wednesday, June 16th.

Happy is the young woman whose dream is fulfilled. With good health, housework is not a burden. Her home echoes to the prattle of healthy children. She must not fail those tiny hands. Her husband is still her comrade and confidant, sharing her new responsibilities. She is content.
Happy, too, is the older woman who holds her children's children in her arms and lives to see a new generation dreaming dreams of its own.

ADVANCE OF THE INTELLECT

Dr. Alexander Meiklejohn, former president of Amherst College and now a member of the University of Wisconsin faculty, has reached the conclusion that America may be on the verge of a period of thought similar to that intellectual era in which Plato and Aristotle were the dominant thinkers. He says the rebellion of modern youth against "the very mention of morals" has produced a period of thought similar to the situation that prevailed in Greece prior to the time of its great philosophers.

These words suggest that Ancient Greece had a population of philosophers and that the masses devoted their hours of leisure and labor to philosophy. The truth is that the average Athenian was probably less of an intellectual giant than the average twentieth century American and that there are today as many and probably more thinkers as far ahead of their times as were Aristotle and Plato. Judged by present standards, the sum of the knowledge of the Greek philosophers was relatively small and their reasonings full of errors. Much of the philosophy and theorizing of Aristotle appears absurd in the light of modern scientific knowledge.

However, all must agree with Doctor Meiklejohn that the evolution of the American mind is progressing with amazing speed and that the country is moving toward a period when larger numbers of men and women will be able to think for themselves and illiteracy will have vanished from the land. Evidences in support of that observation are illimitable.

MAKING SHOPPING EASY

This is truly the age of advertising, and ever expanding advertising. One, who counts himself among the "common people," on reading the advertisements in his newspaper remarked that it is dangerous to the purse to read the advertisements too carefully because you can not even scan them without finding something you want and at a price and of a quality you can't afford not to take advantage of.

It can not be charged against newspaper advertisements that they force upon the public unwanted merchandise. They do, however, inform the public where their merchandise wants can be filled and at the lowest cost. The public with the assistance of newspaper advertising, is now able to buy intelligently and expeditiously. Before the buyer enters the store he or she knows where the desired articles may be purchased and where the most favorable prices are obtainable.

Newspaper advertisements have eradicated the hit and miss and the hurry and scurry from shopping.

Few great men got that way by waiting for instructions.

A TRAGEDY OF WAR

One's spirit of optimism, at times, is put to a severe test. Life looks dark, and there seems to be no hope. Tragedy piles upon tragedy and—

"Take an editorial in the London Times about household silverware. It is losing its former popularity "for the simple reason," according to the Times, "that there is nobody to keep it clean."

If that is not tragedy what is? Nobody to polish the silver. "Hired labour," take it from the London paper, "is too costly to be employed by any but the most fortunate in polishing without end."

It's the war of course. The war put queer ideas in the head of James, who used to do the shining of the silverware. Sometimes it looks as if General Sherman didn't say the half of it.

Today's Talk

THE CLOUDS OF JUNE

I have a weakness for clouds. They always suggest the breath of God blown through the blue to mingle with the golds and emeralds and crimsons of sunsets, as well as the lacelike films of forgotten songs that like to linger under the sunlight for just one more spell.

All clouds are beautiful—those of winter, spring, summer, and autumn. But somehow, to me the clouds of June surpass them all. For they are so full of the fragrance of buds, of growing life, of new poetry, of transitional beauty and possible heavens that take on reality and hope.

To see those floating masses which change with the seconds as they go their way across the world, knowing that a great Intelligence has created them for the inspiration of little human beings, is something to quicken the heart and smooth out worries until they disappear.

I like to see the clouds of June cut in the great scattered spaces of the desert, the mountains, and hills, and I like to see them mingle above the green trees. And when I see them, as I have recently, softly kiss the breasts of huge mountains with the white tops of those giants looking down, I take upon myself a new hold on life and there seems so much more good in the world than formerly.

We should carry the clouds of June in our hearts into the summer, and even into the chills of life's blasts. Nature is our friend.

Not long ago I stood at the end of a long street in a big city and watched the sun color the clouds of approaching June. It was as though a huge opal massed the sky and rested while those garments might wrap his creations about a beautiful body.

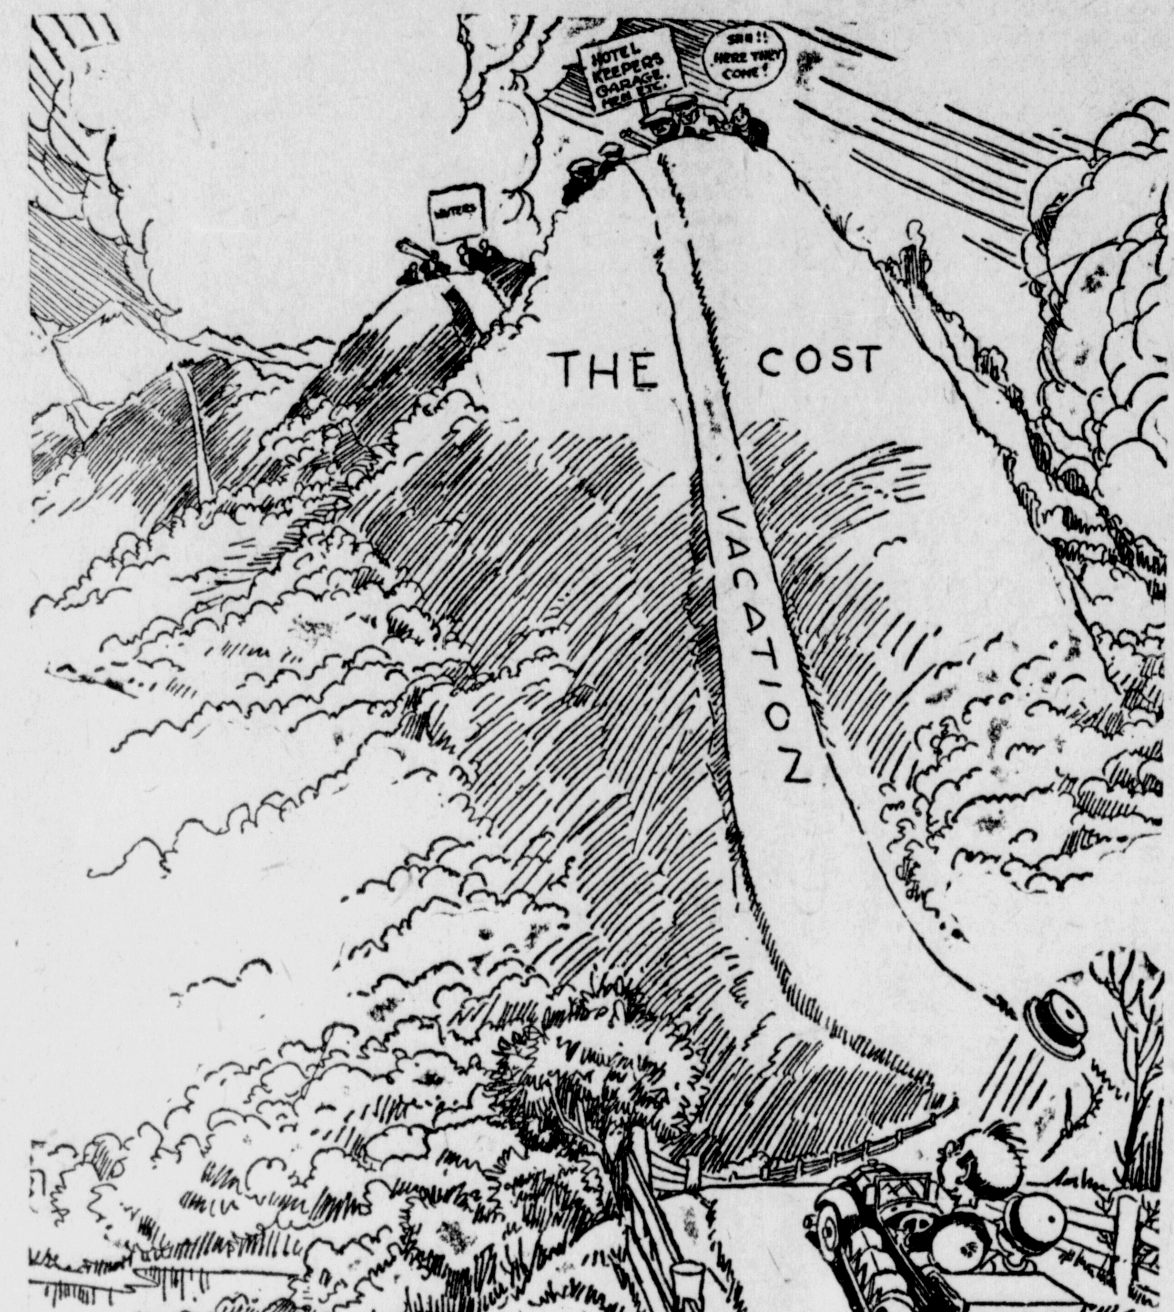

The story is told of Napoleon.

THE NOURISHING PRUNE

To my mind, housekeepers use prunes altogether too seldom. There is nothing like this fruit for "helping out" a light meal. For instance Stuffed Prunes (given below) may be placed on a fancy small plate and used with jams, jellies, candies, or other sideshishes which are scattered about the table at a guest supper. The Prune-Cheese Salad is not only tempting to the eye, but hearty. And the Hot Prune Dessert will enable the housekeeper to serve a mere salad as the main dish on Sunday nights.

Prune-Cheese Salad: Soak one dozen large prunes for three hours, then drain and remove stones. Stuff with walnut meats broken small, then roll each stuffed prune in sugar. Form twelve small balls out of cottage cheese, using two cups of the cheese in all. Place two stuffed prunes with two cheese balls on a bed of crisp lettuce leaves, for one individual salad-portion, then moisten slightly with French dressing. (This recipe makes six salads.)

Stuffed Prunes: The stuffed date is seen everywhere, yet the stuffed prune is equally as delicious. Soak large prunes three hours in cold water to cover, then drain, remove stones, and fill the centers with the following mixture: Into a small bowl put one-half cup of confectioner's sugar; add a few drops of water, till the sugar is stirred to a stiff paste. Flavor with two drops of vanilla extract. Now add one teaspoon of candied ginger finely chopped, and stuff six prunes with this amount of filling.

Hot Prune Dessert: Many women would serve Baked Prune Whip on their tables more frequently were it not for the fact that almost every recipe for this dessert starts out: "Beat five egg whites stiff." But I have reduced my favorite prune whip recipe, so that it requires only two egg-whites, yet will serve four persons. Begin by cooking seventeen large prunes in water to cover, and when half done, add one-half cup of granulated sugar. When tender remove from range, cool, drain, and remove stones. Now measure the prunes before chopping them. Seventeen of them should fill a standard measuring cup, well pressed down. Chop this amount, add the juice of one-half lemon, and fold in two

CHILDREN'S PRATTLE

When three-year-olds begin to chatter, Words are such a simple matter. How they tumble from the lip, How they seem to roll and slip,

Fall and follow, helter-skelter! Just like drops of rain which pelted. Roofs and window panes and grasses, Out comes one, another passes, Rushing without hesitation In one flood of conversation

When little three-year tongues start wagging There is talk which knows no flagging, No embarrassing delay, Wondering if it's right to say, Out the words come, rolling, reeling, All that youthful mind revealing: No false modesty about it, If they think it, out they shout it; Sham or tact or careless error Never stays those lips in terror.

Little girls and boys will never Make an effort to be clever; Lacking wisdom of their betters, On their tongues they have no fetters. They will shock you and surprise you, Openly they'll criticize you, Boldly tell the things they shouldn't, Which their parents thought they wouldn't, For when little tongues start running They are free from grown-up cunning.

When three-year-olds begin to chatter Words are such a simple matter: Every syllable they've learned Into magic speech is turned. Though a short word or a long word, Or the right word or the wrong word, Out it comes, let grief or laughter Very quickly follow after. Lips so innocent and youthful Have not learned to be untruthful.

Over 3,000 cities and towns have streets paved with portland cement concrete

Horse-and-Buggy Pavements Won't Do

Property owners in many towns and cities whose streets swarm with motor traffic are still wasting their money on horse-and-buggy "pavements" of bygone days.

These rough, bumpy streets are directly responsible for broken springs, cut tires, greater depreciation of cars, physical discomfort, loss of time, and many accidents involving loss of life or limb.

And the heavy expense of trying to keep worn-out, dangerous, horse-and-buggy streets in repair, added to their original cost, amounts to more than enough to pay for true, even, non-skid concrete pavement that has the maintenance built in.

So in the long run you are paying for concrete streets. Why not get them?

CITY COUNCIL

City Council of Xenia held its first meeting March 3, 1834, and from that time until January 1, 1918, the city was governed by a mayor and council.

A study of the minutes of council during all these years reveals many interesting things. The musty old volumes tell of all kinds of mayors, principally those who exercised the most scrupulous care in the performance of their duties.

First city officials in 1834 were as follows: Cornelius Clark, mayor; L. P. Frazier, recorder; Alexander Conner, marshal; Jonathan Jones, clerk of the market house; Jonathan H. Wallace, David Douglass, Joseph Harrison, John Howard and John Charters, trustees.

Cornelius Clark, the first mayor of the city was a lawyer.

Jones was not appointed market house clerk until the second weekly meeting, March 10, 1834, but the salary of $20 a year evidently did not appeal to him, since he soon resigned and was appointed marshal to succeed Conner, who had declined to give bond for performance of his duties.

It is practically impossible in some years to tell who was mayor, the records of the council meetings, often not being signed by the mayor. And in order to add to the perplexity, the annual elections seldom speak of the mayor by name, the minutes of the first meeting in April simply stating the mayor was present, but without naming him.

The Theatre

The American theater established itself as an independent institution in 1787 when a play by an American, born and bred in the colonies, was put on the stage of the John Street Theater in New York, Donald Freeman says in his article, "A Nation in Search of a Drama," in "Vanity Fair."

This, the first native comedy ever put professionally before the footlights of the new world, was "The Contrast." The author, Royall C. Tyler, found his inspiration, so the historians of drama tell us, in a view of Richard Brinsley Sheridan's "School for Scandal," given at this same John Street Theater.

Whereas all plays presented for fifty years previously in the colonies were of English or Continental origin, Tyler started the fashion for the native author. He made an important place for the authentic American type, in Freeman's opinion, in his Jonathan, "The apple-knocking down Easter and true prophet of the school of tarnation and b'gosh."

For the most part, during its span of one hundred and fifty years, American drama has been comedy, Freeman goes on to say. "Its highest points invariably came about in those instances when the relation between the created character or set of characters and the attending audience was closest. That is to say, it has been closest when the audiences recognized the depicted types immediately and without effort," is his opinion.

The President's Box, to be reserved at all times for the President of the United States and his family, is included in the plans of the 3,500 seat theater to occupy the lower interior portion of The National Press Building, a four-story structure being erected

GIRLS, WHITEN SKIN WITH LEMON JUICE

The only harmless way to bleach the skin white is to mix the juice of two lemons with three ounces of Orchard White, which any druggist will supply for a few cents. Shake well in a bottle, and you have a whole quarter-pint of the most wonderful skin whiten-er, softener and beautifier. Massage this sweetly fragrant lemon bleach into the face, neck, arms and hands. It can not irritate. Famous stage beauties use it to bring that clear, youthful skin and rosy-white complexion also as a freckle, sunburn and tan bleach. You must mix this remarkable lotion yourself. It can not be bought ready to use because it acts best immediately after it is prepared.

MITZI DIDN'T FOOL DAD—MUCH!

By Jay V. Jay

Mitzi has a PLAN which she thinks should be introduced tactfully. That is why Dad is having his pipe and paper presented to him in this sweet, old-fashioned way. If Dad has a hunch he isn't saying anything except: "How charming you both look today," or something of that sort. So they do, too, Mitzi in a house dress of pongee with polka-dotted trimming and Polly she is so domestic in a house dress of striped tub silk. "Now for it," thinks Dad. "It must be something expensive!" Just how expensive even Mitzi won't have the heart to tell him.

Aunt Sophia was so late in doing her share (bringing his slippers) that the subject has already been broached. It seems that Mitzi feels herself uneducated and, really, provincial. She hasn't had enough travel to broaden her mind. Doesn't Dad think a long trip, all over the country, would be of great value to her—to all of them in fact. What with Aunt Sophia also dressed for the part of the domestic siren (green and white linen) Dad isn't going to have a chance in the world to think any less at all.

ARREST PAIR AFTER AUTO HITS BRIDGE; BOTH ARE INJURED

Carl Pierson, 35, and Stanley Thompson, 35, both of Xenia, were injured, not seriously, when their automobile smashed into a bridge on the Upper Bellbrook Pike, six miles west of Xenia, Tuesday night at 6 o'clock.

Thompson was tossed out of the machine into a ditch and rendered unconscious. It was first believed he was dead but when the ambulance of Undertaker J. H. Nagley arrived at the scene, he had recovered consciousness.

He is suffering from a badly sprained left wrist and minor bruises. Pierson received minor injuries, his left arm when the machine was wrecked.

They were arrested and brought to Xenia by Deputy Sheriff John Baughn. Pierson faces a probable charge of operating a car while intoxicated and Thompson will be charged with intoxication.

Thompson is in the county jail awaiting arraignment probably in Probate Court Wednesday.

With Pierson at the wheel, the automobile was being driven toward Xenia, when the accident occurred.

Rare Turkish tobaccos give distinction to Chesterfield's blend

Drawing from a photograph by our Mr. Gary, showing the loading of Turkish tobacco aboard lighters to be transferred to the ocean liner in midstream.

For Chesterfields,
the best Turkish tobacco
— and nothing but the best!

Where does Chesterfield get its spicy tang, its delicate piquancy of taste and aroma? From costly Turkish tobaccos, world-famous for their distinctive character, their sheer excellence of quality.

And how does Chesterfield get its mellow fullness and its satin-smoothness? From the way this fine Turkish is blended with the choicest

Domestic leaf; carefully, shrewdly, in that can't-be-copied Chesterfield way that brings out the hidden flavors in each type of leaf.

It took no end of skill and patient experiment to get this blend right.

Was it worth it? Just smoke a Chesterfield and let the good tobaccos speak for themselves!

A farmer who is equipped with a Seal Packed Jug for his work in the fields might be called "Seal Packed Jug Farmer." He is a farmer who believes in having near him everything that will help keep him cool and comfortable on hot days. You can be a "Seal Packed Jug Farmer." All you have to do is to take advantage of this opportunity of getting a Seal Packed Jug. You have probably taken your drinking water to the fields in a little crockery jug, and when you came to drink that water you found it warm, instead of cool and refreshing. With a Seal Packed Jug it's different. You put cold water in it and it stays cold—for hours. You don't have to set the jug in the shade, either. Set it in the sun if you want to—the water in the jug stays cold, refreshing and stimulating as a drink of just the same. There is nothing that is as good as cold water after you have worked long in a hot field. If you are equipped with a Seal Packed Jug you can have that cold water. Don't suffer just because you have to work where it is hot. Be a "Seal Packed Jug Farmer." This jug is fine for keeping foods fresh, too. Just the thing in which to carry your lunches. # Rosilyn Dares Mention "Love" To Bored Rich Man

Inn Keeper's Daughter Reveals Dreams In New Chapter Of Gilded Rose

SYNOPSIS
ROSILYN PAGE, twenty-year-old daughter of an avaricious innkeeper, becomes dissatisfied with her life of drudgery. Her restlessness is enhanced by a secret admiration and "hero-worship" for LANDIS RIDGEWAY, good-looking, idle son of a once-wealthy family, who has been a frequent guest at the inn on the marshes of Long Island. Read the first chapter in yesterday's paper for detailed story.

CHAPTER II The Eternal Quest

TOWARDS sunset, having worked all day at the interminable cooking, mending, planning, supervising that her father considered just return for board and lodging, Rosilyn stole out on the marshes for a breath of air. She seated herself on a little jetty by the water, and speculated on the drabness, the intense monotony and dreariness of her existence.

Life was really rather hateful. Hopelessly unjust, as well. Women in Landis Ridgeway's sphere had everything that made for beauty, self-expression. Rosilyn did not know the meaning of the latter word, but her thoughts groped along that channel, with a dull ache of resentment and pain.

Take Lydia Harbrook, for example. . . . She was a sort of queen in Landis' world. Rosilyn had seen her twice, and hated—while she envied—her. Lydia had everything the other lacked. Social position, education, benefit of foreign travel, poise. She had lovely clothes, and knew just how to wear them to the best advantage. Always she had that polished, highly-finished look that comes from beauty-parlors and a personal maid who manicoures, massages and marcelles. (Rosilyn looked down on her own work-roughened hands, and could have wept in chagrin.) Lydia had impeccably good manners, yet contrived a little air of well-bred insolence that put inferiors at their distance. (Rosilyn had felt it.)

Gossip had coupled the name of Landis Ridgeway with this ultra-smart young woman.

"Life is cruel," said Rosilyn aloud, taking a vicarious sort of pleasure in her own misery.

"Not so much cruel as a damn bore!" drawled a lazy, musical voice behind her, and, twisting round, her startled glance met the amused, half-mocking gaze of the man who had filled her thoughts all day.

She would have jumped up, but he placed a hand upon her shoulder, motioning her to be seated.

"May I sit down beside you?"

"Unlike other members of the shooting party, he was always deferential, and she loved him for it. Never did he make her feel the difference in their stations, beyond the contrast which she herself so bitterly and so inevitably realized.

He flung himself down beside her in a lazily graceful attitude, his long legs stretched out comfortably before him, and his shoulders propped against the low stone wall.

"D'you mind if I smoke?" From the pocket of his old shooting-coat he drew out a brown and much-loved pipe.

"No, of course not. Do, please."

He struck a match, and she watched the curve of his hand as he sheltered it from the evening breeze—that finely modelled hand which looked as though it could be miraculously strong, and yet miraculously gentle.

"And now, little lady, tell me all about it. Let me be father confessor. I've needed one myself so often that it intrigues me to adopt the role." He yielded to sudden laughter, though his eyes were strange, inscrutable—"burned out," thought Rosilyn, with a queer little contraction at the heart.

"There is nothing to tell," she said, in a small, stifled voice.

"So that's the tragedy, is it?" He looked quizzically at her. "Nothing ever happens, eh? Well, you know the proverb. . . . 'The happiest people have no histories.'"

She gave a bitter smile.

"You don't believe that ancient bromide. You couldn't possibly—unless—" She hesitated.

"Unless what?" His weary eyes began to show the first faint spark of interest.

"Unless you are one of the people who want everything for themselves—all the experiences, the good times, the freedom—and think that others should have nothing, nothing!" She turned her head away to gaze over the waters of the Sound through a blur of blind-tears.

"So you're yearning to go out into the great big world, and try your wings?" His tone was gentler, though it still held the half-amused, half-mocking note. "You think that life's a glorious Adventure, you intense child! Then stay where you are and avoid the disillusionment."

Rosilyn flung out a quick retort. "But wouldn't that be cowardly? Running away from life, I mean? Even if it does hurt, one lives—and isn't it better to be a Socrates dissatisfied than a pig dissatisfied? (She would show him she had read her bits of the classics, even if they had given her a sort of mental indigestion!)

The man gave his short, musical laugh again.

"Oh, I can quote, too. Listen, restless little lady, to the words of one who plunged headlong into life, and lived every experience just as you are now, thirsty for the great adventure, and then—like me—discovered it was dust and ashes:

"There's not a joy the world can give like that it takes away,

When the glow of early thought declines in feeling's dull decay 'Tis not on youth's smooth cheek the blush alone that fades so fast. But the early bloom of life has fled ere youth itself be past!"

"That's beautiful," said Rosilyn, in a half-whisper. "Byron wrote it didn't he? It—it somehow hurts." Landis Ridgeway turned his mocking gaze upon her.

"For an untutored little savage you have read considerably!" He raised astonished brows.

With anyone else, she would have resented the cognomen 'little savage.' But when he spoke the words, they seemed akin to a caress.

"The coastguard has a library. He lets me use it," she said, shyly. "Sometimes, if it hadn't been for that, I'd have gone mad, I do believe."

The man looked curiously at her, and then an understanding light dawned in his eyes.

"Why, you poor kid, it seems we're both equally up against it. I because the adventure's over, and you because you've never had it. We're both rebels against fate. That's a bond, isn't it?"

He touched her fingers lightly with his own, and every pulse in Rosilyn's slim body hammered to that touch. The blood coursed through her veins like molten fire. She forced herself to say, with outward coolness:

"You say the adventure's over? That's not so. To a man like you, each new day must be a wonderful adventure."

The bitter, brooding look came into those eyes of his again—eyes that were still questing even if life had nothing more to offer.

"Upon the contrary, I shouldn't care if my existence ended here and now. And I know of nobody who would miss me." Then he gave his sudden laugh as though vastly amused at both himself and her. "Why must we be so serious?"

"But I want to be serious. It isn't true that nobody would miss you. You know it isn't." She did not realize the eagerness in her voice.

He puffed meditatively at his pipe.

"The people I pay would miss me, till they got another job. My valet, for instance."

His cynicism hurt her.

"There are things that money cannot buy," she said, sententiously, and very solemn.

"For instance?"

"Her eyes fell.

"Love."

REPORTED DEMPSEY WILL MEET TUNNEY DURING SEPTEMBER

Fighters Say They Are Willing To Sign
For Bout

LOS ANGELES, Cal., June 23.—Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight champion and Gene Tunney, foremost challenger, probably will meet in a title bout next September despite refusal of the New York boxing commission to approve the match.

Both fighters, in interviews today with the United Press declared they were willing and would be ready to meet at the proper time, and in any one of the forty-seven other states in the nation.

"It doesn't matter to me where the match is staged," said Dempsey. "I will fight Tunney in Jersey City or in any other place that Tex Rickard picks."

The challenger appeared similarly unconcerned.

"Of course, I am disappointed," he said, "but if Tex Rickard takes the fight across the river to New York, I have waited a long time for a chance at Dempsey and whether we fight in New York or in some other state is not going to make any difference."

Neither Tunney nor Dempsey appeared worried over the boxing board's threat to bar them from fighting in New York if they take part in a title match in another state. Both felt, they declared that the next championship battle would be a bigger event than anything that has yet taken place.

"I was never in better condition in my life," Dempsey declared today. "Of course I only weigh 185 pounds. I haven't changed five pounds in my weight in the last ten years."

The champion will be thirty years old tomorrow. He trains daily in his downtown gymnasium and next week he leaves for his mountain camp at Colorado Springs. On August 1, he goes into training at his quarters in Saratoga Springs, N. Y., where he plans to polish off for his September battle.

Dempsey, at this time probably is in better physical shape than Tunney, whose mimic love making in the glare of the movie Klieg lights and calcium is admittedly poor training for a world's champion prize fight.

The champion retired from the "movie racket" nearly a year ago, and press reports to the contrary, has adhered since to a rigid course of training in anticipation of a clash with either Tunney or Harry Wells, negro challenger, in September.

INVENTORS TRYING TO INVENT DEVICES FOR FLYING SAFETY

WASHINGTON, June 23.—All parts of the country are attempting to perfect devices to make flying as safe as walking, it is learned at the U. S. Patent Office.

Inventions of every description, to prevent airplanes from crashing to the earth, have been sent in to Commissioner T. E. Robertson. Patents have been granted on about 300 types and an equally large number have been rejected or are pending.

Two Philadelphians have patented a balloon parachute safety device which they believe will prevent aviation disasters. Under their plan there is a large parachute and a balloon on the top wings of a plane. Automatically when a plane begins to fall at the release of a catch by the pilot the parachute opens and the gas bag begins to fill with noninflammable gas. The balloon part is to right the ship while the parachute is to bring it slowly and safely to the earth. This safety apparatus is supposed to prevent an airplane from crashing and is supposed to bring it right side up whether it is doing a tail spin, nose dive or side spin.

A North Carolina inventor patented a contrivance that fits snugly on the upper wings of a plane and opens into a parachute when the pilot touches a spring.

Still another has a parachute on the tail end of a plane, his theory is that the heavy engine will force a ship to fall nose-down and the chute on the rudder end will bring the craft slowly to the earth in an emergency.

Officials of the Patent Office said however that the parachute devices for airplanes was not very successful as it requires such large chutes. They pointed out that it takes fifty square feet to hold a man up in the air it would take a parachute many times larger to save a plane.

Balloon and gas bag safety apparatus, they said, were well enough if the pilot has time enough to fill his bags with lifting gas in the face of an emergency.

WILL KEEP NAMES OF WITNESSES BEFORE COMMITTEE SECRET

Publicity Hurts Inquiry Senate Probers Learn—
—Process Servers Unable To Find
Certain Witnesses

WASHINGTON, June 23.—The future course of the senate committee's investigation into the $3,000,000 Pennsylvania primary will be carefully guarded because of recently discouraging reports of too much publicity.

Chairman Reed announced today that names of witnesses to be summoned hereafter will not be divulged until the process servers have found them and served papers for their appearance.

His action was taken after the committee had been advised that the servers were unable to locate Thomas W. Cunningham, treasurer of the Pennsylvania Republican state committee and Francis X. O'Connor, magistrate in Philadelphia, who are wanted for vital testimony.

Reed said three or four additional subpoenas were issued for new witnesses but declined to make public their names.

The witnesses were understood to have been called on the basis of letters and telegrams from private citizens, purporting to tell what evidence the witnesses could give.

PLAN OHIO SCHOOL REFORM

TEACHERS PROPOSE
LEGISLATION THAT MAY CHANGE SYSTEM

Favor Abolishment Of
Levy and Adoption of
County Unit

CEDAR POINT, O., June 23.—The state school system will undergo an almost complete reformation if legislation proposed to the Ohio State Teachers Association convention here today is enacted.

After a stormy session interposed by bitter wrangling, the association education council recommended to the joint legislative committee on taxation the following:

1.—That the state be redivided, eliminating the "little red school-house" and establishing the county as the potential unit.

2.—That educational standards designed to eliminate incompetent teachers, be set up, establishing nine months of first class education throughout the state.

3.—That the existing 2.65 mill levy be abolished and the county unit taxation plan be adopted.

The recommendations were formulated by the council last year and were adopted only after strenuous opposition.

Each recommendation will be injected into a legislative bill which is to be offered the next general assembly.

Jerome Hull, superintendent of Mahoning county schools, led the remonstrators, declaring the recommendations failed to provide financial equality in some districts and left the schools at the mercy of politicians in others.

The education council cited these facts in support of its attitude:

"There are 114,000 Ohio children in one room schools, twenty-two counties have no high schools, five-sixths of the school population of the state is housed in one-third of the schools, many rural districts are handled for the profit of the school board and many county auditors are unable to properly distribute funds.

The new law, the council asserted, not only would assure competent teachers but also sufficient buildings and equipment.

DREAMS COME TRUE SOMETIMES MISS PAGE FINDS

Dreams sometimes come true, as Rosilyn Page, heroine of May Christie's new serial, which started in this paper yesterday, is finding out in the second chapter of the tale, "The Gilded Rose," which is published today.

She dreamed of attention and kinds words from Landis Ridgeway, handsome, debonaire and wealthy guest at her father's inn, and that young hero responded by speaking to her endeavoring to understand the longing in her heart for a taste of real living.

Thus two chapters of Miss Christie's promising story indicate a plot development that is bound to entrance the casual reader and captivate his attention until the complete unfolding of the yarn brings it to its intriguing conclusion.

Management of The Evening Gazette and The Morning Republican believes that in signing Miss Christie to write serials for these papers a particularly praiseworthy thing has been accomplished.

Readers of serial stories are favored with one of the best from the pen of the best and an association has been started that is expected to bring to readers fiction of a quality that will prove entertaining during the summer months.

DEMOCRATS TRY TO FORCE CUT IN TAXES

WASHINGTON, June 23.—A move to force an immediate tax reduction, including a rebate on this year's payment and abolition of automobile, amusement and all other nuisance taxes, was made today by Democrats in congress.

Cordell Hull, former Democratic national chairman, will introduce today a resolution directing the Ways and Means Committee to meet a month or two before congress reconvenes next December, to draft a bill to "absorb the present $290,000,000 treasury surplus and other revenues."

WEALTHY YOUNG HUSBAND ENDS LIFE AFTER SLAYING HIS WIFE

By United Press
GLEN HEAD, Long Island, June 23.—Servants startled by revolver shots in a country home here went to the room of their 26-year-old mistress to find her dead, a bullet wound above her heart. In a chair, a few feet away was the body of her 29-year-old husband, a bullet wound in his breast. On the floor between them lay an automatic.

The dead couple were Mr. and Mrs. Sidney E. Brewster, both socially prominent in New York and Long Island.

Brewster, Mayflower descendant, Princeton graduate, world war aviator and recently a real estate man had married less than three years ago. His bride, the former Frances

Tracy Lyon, was a granddaughter of James Lyon of Oswego and Charles Thorpe Gilbert.

Police believe young Brewster, last night killed his wife and committed suicide. Only a few seconds came between the two shots. Servants at "Little Scrubby," the secluded home which Brewster's mother had given him, said months of quarreling preceded the shootings.

THIS GUY IS GOOD

TOLEDO, O., June 23.—A first baseman, Welsh made an unassisted double play at third base in a Toledo Federation game here. With one out and runners on second and third the team at bat tried a squeeze play but the batter popped to Welsh who came in about 15 feet for the catch.

The third baseman had been drawn far in and the shortstop had dashed for second as the second baseman had gone to first. The runner had almost reached home and in a desperate spring the first baseman beat him back to third by a foot.

Caillaux accepted appointment as minister of finance in Aristide Briand's ministry, after first having declined.

It was understood Briand was prepared to admit defeat in his effort to form a ministry when Caillaux arrived at the foreign office for one more conference with the premier-designate.

"I want to say, however," after announcing his acceptance, "I see no difficulty in sharing power with M. Briand."

COMMANDER BYRD AT CAPITAL FOR AWARD FROM EXECUTIVES

Hubbard Gold Medal
Will Be Given
Polar Flyer

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Lieut. Commander Richard E. Byrd today reported to his superiors and prepared to receive at their hands an award for his achievement as the first aviator to fly over the North Pole.

President Coolidge and Secretary of the Navy Wilbur were to present Byrd with the Hubbard Gold Medal, Floyd Bennett who accompanied Byrd on his flight, will receive a gold medal. The presentations were arranged by the National Geographic Society.

It was the improved type of sun compass presented to Byrd by Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, President of the National Geographic Society, which guided the daring pilot on his successful flight to the Pole and back from Spitzbergen. It likewise enabled him to determine his exact location at the pole.

The Hubbard Gold Medal has been awarded to four other men, and only two other Americans. Commander Robert E. Peary received it in 1906 following his discovery of the Pole and General Goethals was given the award in 1914 by President Wilson. The last medal was awarded in 1919 to Wiljalmar Stefansson, while Sir Ernest Shackleton was honored by its presentation in 1910.

Commander Byrd will tell of his exploit at a gathering tonight which will include the President and members of his cabinet, members of the diplomatic corps, prominent scientists, government officials and fellow officers.

FARM BLOC SOLONS PUSH HAUGEN BILL

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Senators of the agricultural west today made final efforts to obtain passage of the Dawes-McNary-Haugen farm relief bill, which under a unanimous consent agreement is expected to be brought to a vote tomorrow.

Hoping to gather additional votes, the farm bloc has amended the bill, reducing the equalization fund from $250,000,000 to $150,000,000.

Under another amendment to be proposed today, cotton producers will be assured $75,000,000 if necessary to carry out the system provided for the marketing of surplus crops.

Still another amendment already adopted, eliminates cattle from the bill leaving cotton, corn, wheat and hogs as the agricultural commodities affected by the measure.

HUNGARY LEADS IN SUICIDE NUMBER

BUDAPEST, June 23.—Hungary leads the world in suicides. Although the total population of the country is less than eight million, 2,313 persons killed themselves during the past year.

The figure for the next twelve months promises to be even greater. Despite every effort on the part of "anti-self-murder" societies and even greater preventative work on the part of the police to drag suicide candidates from the Danube the number of self-inflicted deaths is increasing each week.

Among the latest suicides was Eugene Balla, Chief of the Police Statistical Bureau, which keeps the record of suicide cases. He used the method most popular with his fellow-suicides. Avoiding the watchful eye of the bridge policeman whose job it is to hinder such acts, Balla jumped into the Danube from the Margaret Bridge, one of the principal connecting links between the twin cities of Buda and Pest.

BELIEVE 750,000 TO ATTEND FINISH OF HUGE CONGRESS

Effect Of Eucharist On
Education Is Chief
Topic

CHICAGO, June 23.—The pilgrimage of 750,000 people to Mundelein, America's Holy City, for Thursday's crowning and concluding ceremony of the Eucharistic Congress, began today.

Although services were held at Soldiers' Field in Chicago, during the morning, many of the faithful in Chicago, started the forty mile trip early to avoid the traffic jams on the road.

A line of automobiles was moving steadily along the various routes. Some had arranged for camping on the scene of Thursday's demonstration and were equipped with tents and cooking utensils. Others were to stay with friends.

Eucharistic Congress officials estimated 250,000 pilgrims would be on the grounds by midnight.

When services begin Thursday, traffic experts expect 280,000 will have arrived by automobile and 470,000 by train and interurban.

CHICAGO, June 23.—The effect of the Holy Eucharist on education—mainly higher education—was the chief topic of discussion before the twenty-eighth International Eucharistic Congress today.

Leaders in the Catholic educational world were among the 100,000 persons who gathered within the Soldiers Field and heard three speakers discuss education and its relation with the Holy Eucharist. The crowd today had not diminished any from the original throng which gathered for the opening of the sessions Sunday.

His Eminence, Dennis Cardinal Dougherty, of Philadelphia, presided at the Higher Education Day of the congress. Among the were:

The Most Rev. George Gauthier, Archbishop of Taronas, Montreal; Joseph Scott, a member of the order of Knights of St. Gregory, Los Angeles; His Eminence John Cardinal Czernoch, primate of Hungary.

Following the speakers, solemn pontifical high mass was spoken with the Rt. Rev. Edward F. Hoban, bishop auxiliary of Chicago, as celebrant. The sermon was by the most Rev. Austin Dowling, archbishop of St. Paul, Minn.

Today's program was the most representative of North American members of the congress, only one speaker coming from other parts of the world.

Sectional meetings for all of the 23 groups were held at the various meeting places over the city this afternoon. Among the speakers for the English group were the St. Rev. Maurice Landreux, bishop of Dijon, France; the Hon G. Ellisworth Anstruther, editor of "The Tablet," London and the Rev. Vincent di Lorenzo, Rome.

WALES REACHES 32 BUT STILL BACHELOR

LONDON, June 23.—The Prince of Wales reached the age of 32 today but paid scant attention to the event, being wholly absorbed in a round of official entertainments.

In the morning he received the customary bouquet of flowers from his staff at St. James' Palace and at noon he lunched with the King and Queen at Buckingham Palace, a custom scrupulously observed by the children of the Royal Family; tonight, accompanied by Prince Henry and the Princess Ingrid of Sweden, he is expected to "look in" at a big dinner dance in Belgravia where he will probably get a big shower of confetti. In all other respects his birthday will pass like other days.

However, the Empire will celebrate with gusto. Flags were flown on all government buildings throughout the United Kingdom, the Dominions and the Colonies, and at noon sharp the royal salute of twenty one guns boomed out at naval and military stations.

WILL BUILD BOARD SPEED AT AKRON

Police Chief M. E. Graham assisted by Patrolmen Charles Thompson, Fred ones and George Robinson raided Nelson's home at 1:30 Tuesday afternoon and confiscated a large quantity of home brew and wine. The raiders found five-gallon, eight-gallon and six-gallon jugs of liquor packed neatly in a large box beside four bushel baskets loaded with bottles containing home brew.

CENTRAL ALUMNI PARTY

TUESDAY ATTRACTS CROWD

Largest and most successful assembly of alumni of Central High School, a crowd that was far beyond expectations of the officers, was held at new Central High School, Tuesday evening. With reservations for slightly more than 100 people in the hands of the committee Tuesday, the company swelled to 225 for the banquet and program to follow.

The welcome, but unexpected large attendance, was due to the last minute rush for tickets. The unusually interesting program attracted many who had not attended previous reunions. The increased number as compared with effort on the part of those in charge but was successfully managed in every detail.

Alumni began to assemble at 6 o'clock. Halls on the first and second floors of the school were filled with animated groups, renewing old acquaintances and reliving high school memories. Guests were present from over the entire vicinity and from several states. Each guest registered on entering the building, the record being the basis of interesting announcements concerning the classes represented, later.

Thirty-two classes were registered. The oldest class represented was that of 1877. Next in order were 1880, 1887, 1892, 1899 and from that year through 1926. Members of the class of 1926 were honor-guests of the evening and attended the affair in almost a complete group.

One hundred and sixty-three graduates of Central High School were present, the rest being friends, relatives, ex-students and others.

A sumptuous three-course dinner was served in the school cafeteria by Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Kany and staff. Tables were decorated with roses and other Summer bloom, the bouquets alternating with red, white and blue candles. Invocation was pronounced by the Rev. C. G. Lunan, Piqua.

Mr. W. W. Galloway, president of the Alumni Association, presided. After announcing the various classes represented and other interesting data in connection with the evening, he announced Mr. Karl B. Bortman, who introduced Dr. Arthur M. Schlesinger, professor of American History, Harvard University, main speaker of the evening.

Professor Schlesinger expressed his pleasure in being able to attend the reunion, since it marked the twentieth anniversary of his graduation from "old Central." He said the banquet and reception of guests bore out the Biblical story of "the loaves and fishes."

His "address" was more in the nature of an informal talk, and was opened with many clever, droll statements which delighted his hearers. He spoke of his residence in the East, where ancestors mean much to everyone, but in a subtle manner, joked about this condition, "since every family tree is a bit shady." He said the reason, in his opinion, for the recent evolution quarrel in the South was because one faction attempted to picture the wrong kind of ancestors.

After reminiscences of his class of 1906, Mr. Schlesinger said: "I have been impressed with the fact, that while we owe a great debt to the Xenia school system, there is another educational institution which reaches farther than life and remains; which effects children before they reach the school life and stays with them through life. It is made up of the mightiest minds and all countries and is free to every one. I refer to the Public Library."

He proceeded to pay a tribute to the long service of Miss Ella G. McElwain, librarian, Greene County Library. He urged the Alumni Association members to patronize the local library and appreciate the services of Miss McElwain.

Minutes of the 1925 Alumni Association meeting were read by Miss May Orr, secretary. Treasurer's report for last year was read by Mr. Frederick Anderson. Selections of the nominating committee were then announced by Miss Helen Jones, chairman. Officers chosen by the committee were unanimously accepted by the association, as follows:

President, Mr. Charles O'Brien; vice-president, Miss Marjorie Flynn; secretary, Miss Fay Ledbetter; treasurer, Mr. Norbert McCallister. The executive committee is composed of Mr. Philip Frame, chairman; Mrs. Oren Ledbetter, Mrs. Carl Nybladh, Mr. Lawrence Whittington, Mr. William Horner and Miss Louise B. Shaffer.

Presentation of "Betty Attitudes by eight members of the dramatic class, Xenia Business and Professional Women's Club, followed the banquet, in Jean B. Elwell Auditorium.

The play, in four scenes, was particularly appropriate for an alumni program, since it carried back to the early part of the nineteenth century to the present day. The eternal conflict between mother and daughter and the "shocking" new customs as introduced by each younger generation was the theme of the piece.

Dressed in hoop skirts and all accessories of the quaint period costumes of the early "eighties," Miss Elsie Canby and Mrs. Clara Newkinger, were characters in the first scene. Mother and daughter of the later period of that century were taken by Miss Virginia Fletcher and Miss Roberta Shaw. The "Twentieth Century Girl" reminiscent of the "Gibson Girl days" was depicted by Miss Clara Marshall as the "daughter" with Miss Nelle McKay, as the "mother."

The modern mother and daughter were portrayed by Miss Loretta Paulin and Miss Alice Foley, respectively. The latter scene brought out the introduction of the "Charleston," bridge, golf and other interests taking both outside the home. Dancing attracted the guests to the school gymnasium during the remainder of the evening where the Harmony Kings furnished a delightful program. Groups of younger guests joined the party for the dance and added to the pleasure of the closing hours. Here the "Charleston" held sway and the remainder of the evening was thoroughly enjoyed by the large company.

JURY PROBES DEATH IN PITCHED BATTLE

BATAVIA, O., June 23.—A coroner's jury was convened here today to investigate a pitched battle that resulted in the death of Edward Wood, Concord farmer, the arrest of Robert Gregor, another farmer and the injury of Fred Wood, son of the dead man, and Henry Gregor, father of the prisoner.

Wood was shot to death after he and his son drove onto the Gregor farm to cut bean poles and remove a load of stone, according to police. Gregor was said to have opened fire, killing Wood. Stones then were hurled with yong Wood and the elder Gregor being wounded.

The Woods and the Gregors had been at outs for some time. A charge of first degree murder may be made against young Gregor in the inquest, it was said.

RECLUSE BURNED TO DEATH IN HUT

MARTIN'S FERRY, O., June 23.—The charred body of J. F. Glover, 80, former recluse and self-styled "medicine man," was found today in the ruins of what had been his sheet-iron hut near here.

The discovery was made by passing motorists, who were drawn to the scene by wisps of smoke rising above the trees.

The death of the aged man was shrouded in as much mystery as was his life.

Mr. and Mrs. Merlin F. Crutcher, Wilbur Wright Field, are receiving congratulations on the birth of a daughter, Marjorie Jean, at St. Ann's, Dayton, Wednesday, June 16th.

A MAN dreams of wealth, success and power. A woman dreams of a home of her own and babies to love. Happy is the young woman whose dream is fulfilled. With good health, housework is not a burden. Her home echoes to the prattle of healthy children. She must not fail those tiny hands. Her husband is still her comrade and confidant, sharing her new responsibilities. She is content. Happy, too, is the older woman who holds her children's children in her arms and lives to see a new generation dreaming dreams of its own.

A young girl in Iowa was in such a weakened condition that she had to leave school. One day, after being in poor health for about two years, she picked up an advertising booklet and read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"I began to take your medicine," she writes. "Now I am a housekeeper with six children and I have taken it before each was born. I cannot tell you all the good I have received from it. I read all of your little books I can get and I tell everyone I know what the Vegetable Compound does for me."

ADVANCE OF THE INTELLECT

Dr. Alexander Meiklejohn, former president of Amherst College and now a member of the University of Wisconsin faculty, has reached the conclusion that America may be on the verge of a period of thought similar to that intellectual era in which Plato and Aristotle were the dominant thinkers. He says the rebellion of modern youth against "the very mention of morals" has produced a period of thought similar to the situation that prevailed in Greece prior to the time of its great philosophers.

These words suggest that Ancient Greece had a population of philosophers and that the masses devoted their hours of leisure and labor to philosophy. The truth is that the average Athenian was probably less of an intellectual giant than the average twentieth century American and that there are today as many and probably more thinkers as far ahead of their times as were Aristotle and Plato. Judged by present standards, the sum of the knowledge of the Greek philosophers was relatively small and their reasonings full of errors. Much of the philosophy and theorizing of Aristotle appears absurd in the light of modern scientific knowledge.

However, all must agree with Doctor Meiklejohn that the evolution of the American mind is progressing with amazing speed and that the country is moving toward a period when larger numbers of men and women will be able to think for themselves and illiteracy will have vanished from the land. Evidences in support of that observation are illimitable.

MAKING SHOPPING EASY

This is truly the age of advertising, and ever expanding advertising. One, who counts himself among the "common people," on reading the advertisements in his newspaper remarked that it is dangerous to the purse to read the advertisements too carefully because you can not even scan them without finding something you want and at a price and of a quality you can't afford not to take advantage of.

It can not be charged against newspaper advertisements that they force upon the public unwanted merchandise. They do, however, inform the public where their merchandise wants can be filled and at the lowest cost. The public with the assistance of newspaper advertising, is now able to buy intelligently and expeditiously. Before the buyer enters the store he or she knows where the desired articles may be purchased and where the most favorable prices are obtainable.

Newspaper advertisements have eradicated the hit and miss and the hurry and scurry from shopping.

Few great men got that way by waiting for instructions.

A TRAGEDY OF WAR

One's spirit of optimism, at times, is put to a severe test. Life looks dark, and there seems to be no hope. Tragedy piles upon tragedy and—

Take an editorial in the London Times about household silverware. It is losing its former popularity "for the simple reason," according to the Times, "that there is nobody to keep it clean."

If that is not tragedy what is? Nobody to polish the silver. "Hired labour," take it from the London paper, "is too costly to be employed by any but the most fortunate in polishing without end."

It's the war of course. The war put queer ideas in the head of James, who used to do the shining of the silverware. Sometimes it looks as if General Sherman didn't say the half of it.

Today's Talk

THE CLOUDS OF JUNE

I have a weakness for clouds. They always suggest the breath of God blown through the blue to mingle with the golds and emeralds and crimsons of sunsets, as well as the lacelike films of forgotten songs that like to linger under the sunlight for just one more spell.

All clouds are beautiful—those of winter, spring, summer, and autumn. But somehow to me the clouds of June surpass them all. For they are so full of the fragrance of buds, of growing life, of new poetry, of transitional beauty and possible heavens that take on reality and hope.

To see those floating masses which change with the seconds as they go their way across the world, knowing that a great intelligence has created them for the inspiration of little human beings, is something to quicken the heart and smooth out worries until they disappear.

I like to see the clouds of June cut in the great scattered spaces of the desert, the mountains, and hills, and I like to see them mingle above the green trees. And when I see them, as I have recently, softly kiss the breasts of huge mountains with the white tops of those giants looking down, I take upon myself a new hold on life and there seems so much more good in the world than formerly.

We should carry the clouds of June in our hearts into the summer, and even into the chills of life's blasts. Nature is our friend. Not long ago I stood at the end of a long street in a big city and watched the sun color the clouds of approaching June. It was as though a huge opal massed the sky and rested while the garments might wrap the creations about a beautiful body.

The story is told of Napoleon.

He was listening to a group of men discussing the futility of believing in a God. He looked into the sky and saw a beautiful sunset. "Look!" he said, "So long as man can behold such a sight, do not discuss the non-existence of a God."

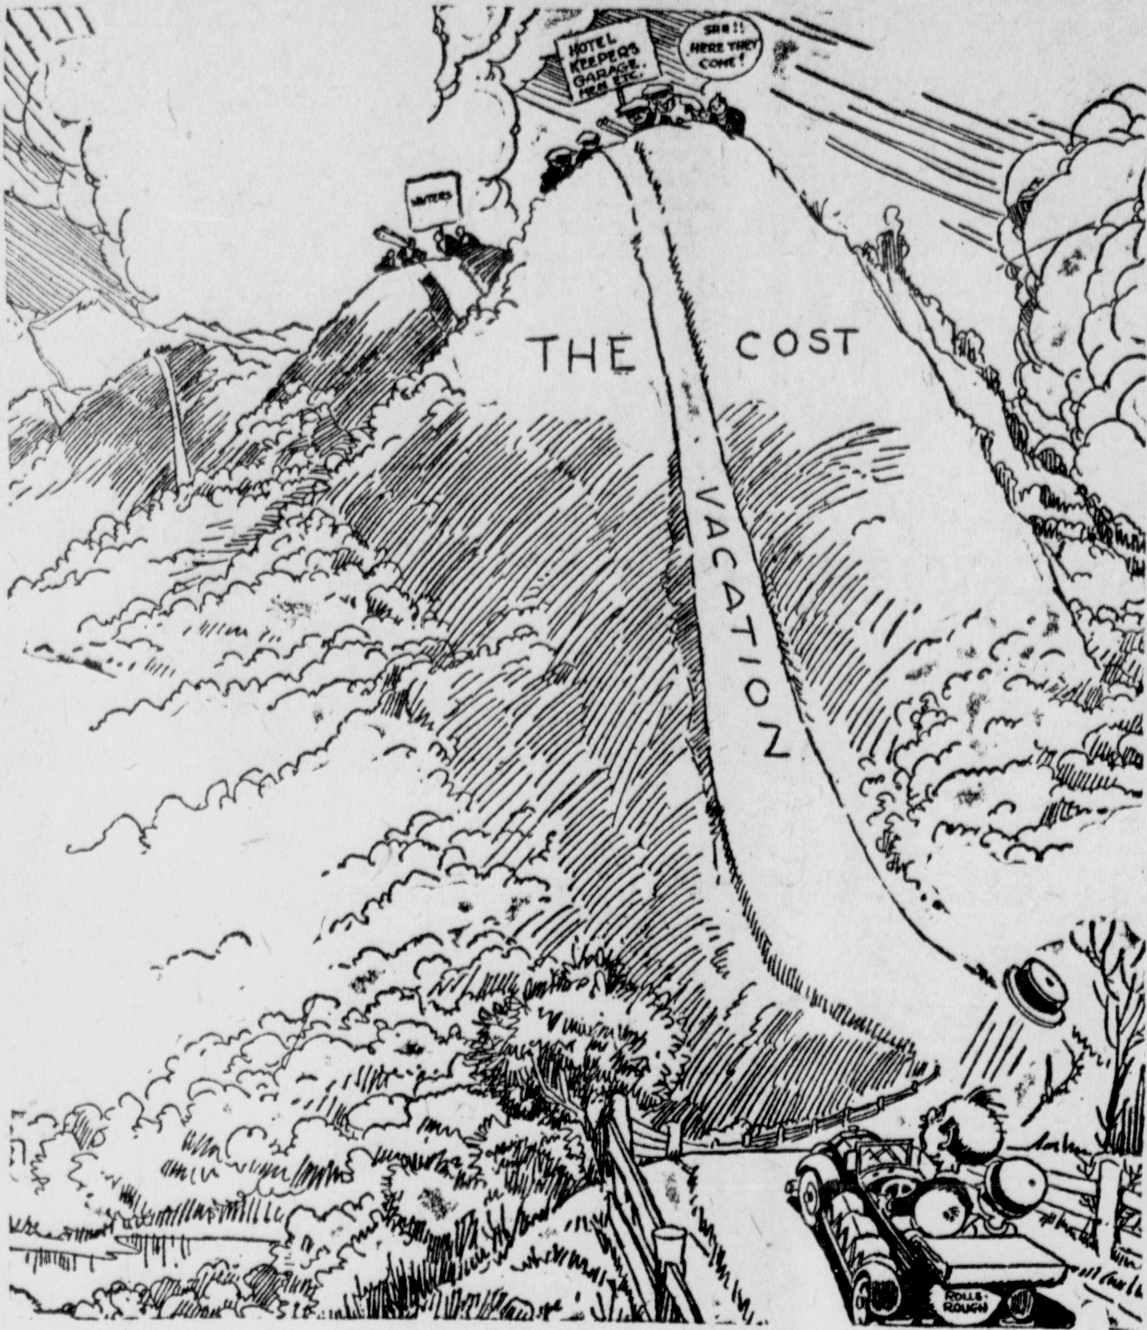

Have you ever loved the clouds of June? All clouds were made to be loved.

THE NOURISHING PRUNE

To my mind, housekeepers use prunes altogether too seldom. There is nothing like this fruit for "helping out" a light meal. For instance Stuffed Prunes (given below) may be placed on a fancy small plate and used with jams, jellies, candies, or other sidedishes which are scattered about the table at a guest supper. The Prune-Cheese Salad is not only tempting to the eye, but hearty. And the Hot Prune Dessert will enable the housekeeper to serve a mere salad as the main dish on Sunday nights.

Prune-Cheese Salad: Soak one dozen large prunes for three hours, then drain and remove stones. Stuff with walnut meats broken small, then roll each stuffed prune in sugar. Form twelve small balls out of cottage cheese, using two cups of the cheese in all. Place two stuffed prunes with two cheese balls on a bed of crisp lettuce leaves, for one individual salad-portion, then moisten slightly with French dressing. (This recipe makes six salads.)

Stuffed Prunes: The stuffed date is seen everywhere, yet the stuffed prune is equally as delicious. Soak large prunes three hours in cold water to cover, then drain, remove stones, and fill the centers with the following mixture: Into a small bowl put one-half cup of confectioner's sugar; add a few drops of water, till the sugar is stirred to a stiff paste. Flavor with two drops of vanilla extract. Now add one teaspoon of candied ginger finely chopped, and stuff six prunes with this amount of filling.

Hot Prune Dessert: Many women would serve Baked Prune Whip on their tables more frequently were it not for the fact that almost every recipe for this dessert starts out: "Beat five egg whites stiff." But I have reduced my favorite prune whip recipe, so that it requires only two egg-whites, yet will serve four persons. Begin by cooking seventeen large prunes in water to cover, and when half done, add one-half cup of granulated sugar. When tender remove from range, cool, drain, and remove stones. Now measure the prunes before chopping them. Seventeen of them should fill a standard measuring cup, well pressed down. Chop this amount, add the juice of one-half lemon, and fold in two

Never stays those lips in terror.

Horse-and-Buggy Pavements Won't Do

Property owners in many towns and cities whose streets swarm with motor traffic are still wasting their money on horse-and-buggy "pavements" of bygone days.

These rough, bumpy streets are directly responsible for broken springs, cut tires, greater depreciation of cars, physical discomfort, loss of time, and many accidents involving loss of life or limb.

And the heavy expense of trying to keep worn-out, dangerous, horse-and-buggy streets in repair, added to their original cost, amounts to more than enough to pay for true, even, non-skid concrete pavement that has the maintenance built in.

So in the long run you are paying for concrete streets. Why not get them?

CITY COUNCIL

City Council of Xenia held its first meeting March 3, 1834, and from that time until January 1, 1918, the city was governed by a mayor and council.

A study of the minutes of council during all these years reveals many interesting things. The musty old volumes tell of all kinds of mayors, principally those who exercised the most scrupulous care in the performance of their duties.

First city officials in 1834 were as follows: Cornelius Clark, mayor; L. P. Frazier, recorder; Alexander Conner, marshal; Jonathan Jones, clerk of the market house; Jonathan H. Wallace, David Douglass, Joseph Harbison, John Howard and John Charters, trustees.

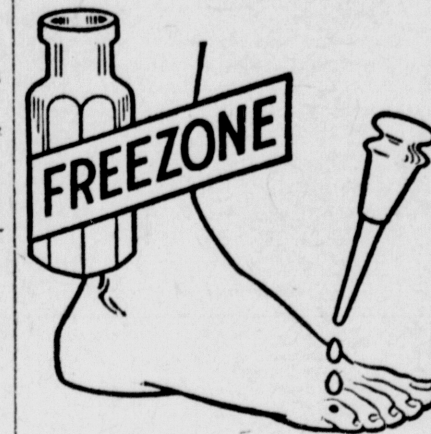

Cornelius Clark, the first mayor of the city was a lawyer.

Jones was not appointed market house clerk until the second weekly meeting, March 10, 1834, but the salary of $20 a year evidently did not appeal to him, since he soon resigned and was appointed marshal to succeed Conner, who had declined to give bond for performance of his duties.

It is practically impossible in some years to tell who was mayor, the records of the council meetings often not being signed by the mayor. And in order to add to the perplexity, the annual elections seldom speak of the mayor by name, the minutes of the first meeting in April simply stating the mayor was present, but without naming him.

The Theatre

The American theater established itself as an independent institution in 1787 when a play by an American, born and bred in the colonies, was put on the stage of the John Street Theater in New York, Donald Freeman says in his article, "A Nation in Search of a Drama," in "Vanity Fair."

This, the first native comedy ever put professionally before the footlights of the new world, was "The Contrast." The author, Royall C. Tyler, found his inspiration, so the historians of drama tell us, in a view of Richard Brinsley Sheridan's "School for Scandal," given at this same John Street Theater.

Whereas all plays presented for fifty years previously in the colonies were of English or Continental origin, Tyler started the fashion for the native author. He made an important place for the authentic American type, in Freeman's opinion, in his Jonathan, "The apple-knocking down Easter and true prophet of the school of tarnation and b'gosh."

For the most part, during its span of one hundred and fifty years, American drama has been comedy, Freeman goes on to say. "It's highest points invariably came about in those instances when the relation between the created character or set of characters and the attending audience was closest. That is to say, it has been closest when the audience recognized the depicted types immediately and without effort," is his opinion.

The President's Box, to be served at all times for the President of the United States and his family, is included in the plans of the 3,500 seat theater to occupy the lower interior portion of The National Press Building, a four-story structure being erected

The only harmless way to bleach the skin white is to mix the juice of two lemons with three ounces of Orchard White, which any druggist will supply for a few cents. Shake well in a bottle, and you have a whole quarter-pint of the most wonderful skin whitener, softener and beautifier. Massage this sweetly fragrant lemon bleach into the face, neck, arms and hands. It can not irritate. Famous stage beauties use it to bring that clear, youthful skin and rosy-white complexion also as a freckle, sunburn and tan bleach. You must mix this remarkable lotion yourself. It can not be bought ready to use because it acts best immediately after it is prepared.

MITZI DIDN'T FOOL DAD—MUCH!

By Jay V. Jay

Mitzi has a PLAN which she thinks should be introduced tactfully. That is why Dad is having his pipe and paper presented to him in this sweet, old-fashioned way. If Dad has a hunch he isn't saying anything except: "How charming you both look today," or something of that sort. So they do, too, Mitzi in a house dress of pongee with polka-dotted trimming and Polly she is so domestic in a house dress of striped tub silk. "Now for it," thinks Dad. "It must be something expensive!" Just how expensive even Mitzi won't have the heart to tell him.

Aunt Sophia was so late in doing her share (bringing his slippers) that the subject has already been broached. It seems that Mitzi feels herself uneducated and, really, provincial. She hasn't had enough travel to broaden her mind. Doesn't Dad think a long trip, all over the country, would be of great value to her—to all of them in fact. What with Aunt Sophia also dressed for the part of the domestic siren (green and white linen) Dad isn't going to have a chance in the world to think any more at all.

ARREST PAIR AFTER AUTO HITS BRIDGE; BOTH ARE INJURED

Carl Pierson, 35, and Stanley Thompson, 36, both of Xenia, were injured, not seriously, when their automobile smashed into a bridge on the Upper Bellbrook Pike, six miles west of Xenia, Tuesday night at 6 o'clock.

Thompson was tossed out of the machine into a ditch and rendered unconscious. It was first believed he was dead but when the ambulance of Undertaker J. H. Nagley arrived at the scene, he had recovered consciousness.

He is suffering from a badly sprained left wrist and minor bruises. Pierson received minor injuries to his left arm when the machine was wrecked.

They were arrested and brought to Xenia by Deputy Sheriff John Baughn. Pierson faces a probable charge of operating a car while intoxicated and Thompson will be charged with intoxication.

Thompson is in the county jail awaiting arraignment probably in Probate Court Wednesday.

With Pierson at the wheel, the automobile was being driven toward Xenia, when the accident occurred.

Cedarville Twp., will organize at a meeting Wednesday night and Miami Twp., organized Tuesday night. Beaver Creek Twp., organized Monday night by election of Horace Ankney, president; Ed Ferguson, vice-president and I. M. Coy, secretary and treasurer. Mr. Ankney and S. H. Clifton and Searle are examiners for the Dayton district which includes Greene County.

An examination of county offices is made about every two years. The examiners will probably not complete their audit for several months.

Health Hints by the Father of Physical Culture

Bernarr Macfadden

Tight shoes impede the circulation, cause corns, bunions, ingrowing toe-nails, broken-down arches and weak ankles, and put a strain upon the nerves and temper. High heels throw the spine out of proper equilibrium and injure the eyesight.

On the other hand, comfortable shoes make one feel better, walk better and look better. They induce a desire for exercise and afford the opportunity for retaining sturdiness and beauty. Shoes should be changed every day and a separate pair should be reserved for rainy weather. This is more economical as the shoes will wear longer and look better. Rubber heels are good, as they take the jar off the spine.

If we condemn tight shoes, what must we say of the tight corsets? The one result, in the main, in external life and discomfort to the wearer, but the other strikes at the vital organs, and endangers the functions of the whole body. "If corsets are made properly and are not worn too tightly," says one who condones them, "little harm is done." But how is one to know what is a properly made corset and what measure of pressure is harmless?

The corset provides a support for the body and so renders the muscles of the torso useless. These muscles, like those of the legs and arms, were intended to be used. The corset causes the spine, hollows the chest, and causes the abdomen to protrude. This last observation will be gained by some women who say they wear a corset to keep their abdomens in. Granted. But if they had never worn a stiff, steel-lined arrangement about their bodies, they would not now have the ugly abdomen they force itself out the minute the corsets are removed.

The corset restricts the circulation of the blood, and large legs and feet are among its results. It is also a cause of dyspepsia, because it interferes with the action of the ribs, diaphragm and stomach. The stomach was not meant to be cramped. The corset weakens the vital organs.

Beauty is the great aim of most women, and they disregard the danger of constipation, nervous diseases, and replaced uteri that are induced by the corset. Even when so afflicted, they will not admit that the corset is responsible.

Rare Turkish tobaccos give distinction to Chesterfield's blend

Drawing from a photograph by our Mr. Gary, showing the loading of Turkish tobacco aboard lighters to be transferred to the ocean liner in midstream.

For Chesterfields, the best Turkish tobacco —and nothing but the best!

Where does Chesterfield get its spicy tang, its delicate piquancy of taste and aroma? From costly Turkish tobaccos, world-famous for their distinctive character, their sheer excellence of quality.

And how does Chesterfield get its mellow fullness and its satin-smoothness? From the way this fine Turkish is blended with the choicest

Domestic leaf; carefully, shrewdly, in that can't-be-copied Chesterfield way that brings out the hidden flavors in each type of leaf.

It took no end of skill and patient experiment to get this blend right.

Was it worth it? Just smoke a Chesterfield and let the good tobaccos speak for themselves!

SEAL PACKED JUG

Be a "Seal Packed Jug Farmer"

A farmer who is equipped with a Seal Packed Jug for his work in the fields might be called "Seal Packed Jug Farmer." He is a farmer who believes in having near him everything that will help keep him cool and comfortable on hot days. You can be a "Seal Packed Jug Farmer." All you have to do is to take advantage of this opportunity of getting a Seal Packed Jug. You have probably taken your drinking water to the fields in a little crockery jug, and when you came to drink that water you found it warm, instead of cool and refreshing. With a Seal Packed Jug it's different. You put cold water in it and it stays cold—for hours. You don't have to set the jug in the shade, either. Set it in the sun if you want to—the water in the jug stays cold, refreshing and stimulating as a drink of just the same. There is nothing that is as good as cold water after you have worked long in a hot field. If you are equipped with a Seal Packed Jug you can have that cold water. Don't suffer just because you have to work where it is hot. Be a "Seal Packed Jug Farmer." This jug is fine for keeping foods fresh, too. Just the thing in which to carry your lunches. Great for touring and picnicking.

Rosilyn Dares Mention "Love" To Bored Rich Man

SYNOPSIS

ROSILYN PAGE, twenty-year-old daughter of an avaricious innkeeper, becomes dissatisfied with her life of drudgery. Her restlessness is enhanced by a secret admiration and "hero-worship" for LANDIS RIDGEWAY, good-looking, idle son of a once wealthy family, who has been a frequent guest at the inn on the marshes of Long Island.

Read the first chapter in yesterday's paper for detailed story.

CHAPTER II

The Eternal Quest

TOWARDS sunset, having worked all day at the interminable cooking, mending, planning, supervising that her father considered just return for board and lodging, Rosilyn stole out on the marshes for a breath of air. She seated herself on a little jetty by the water, and speculated on the drabness, the intense monotony and dreariness of her existence.

Life was really rather hateful. Hopelessly unjust, as well. Women in Landis Ridgeway's sphere had everything that made for beauty, self-expression. Rosilyn did not know the meaning of the latter word, but her thoughts groped along that channel, with a dull ache of resentment and pain.

Take Lydia Harbrook, for example. She was a sort of queen in Landis' world. Rosilyn had seen her twice, and hated—while she envied—her. Lydia had everything the other lacked. Social position, education, benefit of foreign travel, poise. She had lovely clothes, and knew just how to wear them to the best advantage. Always she had that polished, highly-finished look that comes from beauty-parlors and a personal maid who manicures, massages and marcelles. (Rosilyn looked down on her own work-roughened hands, and could have wept in chagrin.) Lydia had impeccably good manners, yet contrived a little air of well-bred insolence that put inferiors at their distance. (Rosilyn had felt it.)

Gossip had coupled the name of Landis Ridgeway with this ultra-smart young woman.

"Life is cruel," said Rosilyn aloud, taking a vicarious sort of pleasure in her own misery.

"Not so much cruel as a damn bore!" drawled a lazy, musical voice behind her, and, twisting round, her startled glance met the amused, half-mocking gaze of the man who had filled her thoughts all day.

She would have jumped up, but he placed a hand upon her shoulder, motioning her to be seated.

"May I sit down beside you?" Unlike the other members of the shooting party, he was always deferential, and she loved him for it. Never did he make her feel the difference in their stations, beyond the contrast which she herself so bitterly and so inevitably realized.

He flung himself down beside her in a lazily graceful attitude, his long legs stretched out comfortably before him, and his shoulders propped against the low stone wall.

"D'you mind if I smoke?" From the pocket of his old shooting-coat he drew out a brown and much-loved pipe.

"No, of course not. Do, please." He struck a match, and she watched the curve of his hand as he sheltered it from the evening breeze—that finely modelled hand which looked as though it could be miraculously strong, and yet miraculously gentle.

"And now, little lady, tell me all about it. Let me be father confessor. I've needed one myself so often that it intrigues me to adopt the role." He yielded to sudden laughter, though his eyes were strange, inscrutable—burned out, thought Rosilyn, with a queer little contraction at the heart.

"There is nothing to tell," she said, in a small, stifled voice.

"So that's the tragedy, is it?" He looked quizzically at her. "Nothing ever happens, eh? Well, you know the proverb—'The happiest people have no histories.'"

She gave a bitter smile.

"You don't believe that ancient brocade. You couldn't possibly—unless—"

"Unless what?" His weary eyes began to show the first faint spark of interest.

"Unless you are one of the people who want everything for themselves—all the experiences, the good times, the freedom—and think that others should have nothing, nothing!" She turned her head away to gaze over the waters of the Sound through a blur of blinding tears.

"So you're yearning to go out into the great big world, and try your wings?" His tone was gentler, though it still held the half-amused, half-mocking note. "You think that life's a glorious adventure, you intense child! Then stay where you are and avoid the disillusionment."

Rosilyn flung out a quick retort.

"But wouldn't that be cowardly? Running away from life, I mean? Even if it does hurt, one lives—and isn't it better to be a Socrates dissatisfied than a pig dissatisfied?" (She would show him she had read her bits of the classics, even if they had given her a sort of mental indigestion.)

The man gave his short, musical laugh again.

"Oh, I can quote, too. Listen, restless little lady, to the words of one who plunged headlong into life, avid for every experience just as you are now, thirsty for the great adventure, and then like me—discovered it was dust and ashes:

"There's not a joy the world can give like that it takes away,

When the glow of early thought declines in feeling's dull decay. 'Tis not on youth's smooth cheek the blush alone that fades so fast, But the early bloom of life has fled ere youth itself be past!"

"That's beautiful," said Rosilyn, in a half-whisper. "Byron wrote it didn't he? It—it somehow hurts." Landis Ridgeway turned his mocking gaze upon her.

"For an untutored little savage you have read considerably!" He raised astonished brows.

With anyone else, she would have resented the cognomen 'little savage.' But when he spoke the words, they seemed akin to a caress.

"The coastguard has a library. He lets me use it," she said, shyly. "Sometimes, if it hadn't been for that, I'd have gone mad, I do believe."

The man looked curiously at her, and then an understanding light dawned in his eyes.

"Why, you poor kid, it seems we're both equally up against it. I because the adventure's over, and you because you've never had it. We're both rebels against fate. That's a bond, isn't it?"

He touched her fingers lightly with his own, and every pulse in Rosilyn's slim body hammered to that touch. The blood coursed through her veins like molten fire. She forced herself to say, with outward coolness:

"You say the adventure's over? That's not so. To a man like you, each new day must be a wonderful adventure."

The bitter, brooding look came into those eyes of his again—eyes that were still questioning even if life had nothing more to offer.

"Upon the contrary, I shouldn't care if my existence ended here and now. And I know of nobody who would miss me." Then he gave his sudden laugh as though vastly amused at both himself and her. "Why must we be so serious?"

"But I want to be serious. It isn't true that nobody would miss you. You know it isn't." She did not realize the eagerness in her voice.

He puffed meditatively at his pipe.

"The people I pay would miss me, till they got another job. My valet, for instance."

His cynicism hurt her.

"There are things that money cannot buy," she said, sententiously, and very solemnly.

"For instance?"

Her eyes fell.

"Love."

Tomorrow: Rosilyn's Awakening.
